CITIZENS ENJOY MUNICIPAL TREE

Under a sky filled with bright stars and without even a hint of winter in the air, the annual municipal Christmas tree entertainment was enjoyed by several hundred people in front of the Daly City Hall on Wellington avenue last Friday evening.

An excellent program was rendered which had been arranged by a committee composed of Daly City Councilmen, A. J. Bodien acting as chairman.

A platform covered with Christmas greens had been erected under a huge, brightly lighted Christmas tree, and streamers of colored electric lights, with the City Hall in all its Christmas array for a background.

Christmas carols and patriotic songs played on the beautiful new chimes of Our Lady of Perpetual Help church were a very appropriate opening number.

Several selections were rendered by San Mateo County Pyramid No. 25 Sciots Band, under the direction of Henry Overback, which were followed by words of greeting from Mayor H. H. Smith.

Christmas carols were sung by the children of the Eighth grade of Crocker school, under the direction of Miss Muriel Mosconi.

The Simonette Trio, through the courtesy of the Daly City Theatre, sang several very pleasing numbers.

Mrs. Louise Adams, a local artist, also sang several solos.

Songs by the three boys of KPO, through the courtesy of Johnny Degliantoni, were greatly enjoyed.

Miss Dorothy Williams favored the happy gathering with several popular songs.

The closing remarks were made by Councilman A. J. Bodien, who wished every one a very merry Christmas, and thanked all taking part for making the affair such a success.

At the close of the entertainment the Daly City Fire Department, headed by Chief J. J. Kennedy, passed in review.

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS EXEMPLIFY SECOND DEGREE

The second degree of the order of Knights of Columbus was conferred on a class of twenty candidates at Eagles Hall, Tuesday evening, December 17. Grand Knight Henderson of Golden Gate Council was the conferring officer and was assisted by Past Grand Knight of San Mateo Council, Miles Sharkey; Warden of Golden Gate Council, Campbell, and officers of Daly City Council.

The degree was exemplified in a way that impressed all present, and this large class assures a class for the third degree and full Knighthood early in January.

After the meeting all sat at a table which encircled the hall and enjoyed a roast pork barbecue. Daly City Council's Grand Knight, Thomas Callan, presided as toastmaster and short talks were heard from Rev. Father Donohoe, State Deupty Robert MacKenze, G. K. of Golden Gate Council Campbell, P. G. K. of San Mateo Council Miles Sharkey; and P. G. K. of Daly City Council, R. Ennis.

State Deputy MacKenzie bowed to G. K. Thomas Callan's insistance that he (MacKenzie) sing and offered three Scotch songs. The State Deputy was immediately swamped by the theatre party committee, attempting to sign him up for an appearance at the Daly City Theatre on Wednesday evening, January 8. Whether they succeeded or not is still a mystery, but they claim to have lined up an array of talent that will keep those attending talking about the greatest show Daly City ever had in its history. Let's go to the K. of C. show on January 8.

CANDLE LIGHT WATCH AT BAPTIST MISSION

The new pastor at the Calvary Baptist Mission, Charles Woessner, A. B., began his work at his new post on December 22, succeeding the Rev. A. C. Mintz, who has accepted the pastorate of the Sunnyvale Baptist Mission.

Rev. Woessner's sermon topics for next Sunday will be: In the morning, "All At It;" in the evening, "The Life God Planned."

On New Years Eve, Tuesday, December 31st, the Calvary Baptist Mission will hold a candle light watch night service. The service will begin at 8 o'clock. There will be an intermission, when coffee and sandwiches will be served, and from 11 to 12 the final watch service will be held. It will be made exceedingly impressive, and the services will be one never to be forgotten.

Wednesday night, January 1, which is prayer meeting evening, a fisherman's program will be carried out. The pastor will speak on the subject, "Can Fish Still Be Caught With Bent Pins?"

SEEK MORE TIME TO FINISH WORK

At the regular meeting of the Daly City Council last Monday night, all members answered roll call, and Mayor H. H. Smith presided. City Attorney J. E. McCurdy was in attendance after a month's vacation and rest.

A communication was received from the California Construction Company, asking for a 90 day extension of time within which to complete their contract for the improvement of Jefferson Park, informing the Council that the work will be completed within the specified time, but the request for the extension of time was that the construction company might have time to get out their assessment bonds. An extension of sixty days was granted by the board.

A letter was received from Victor Bjorkman, a builder, stating that he is constructing a bungalow on the east line of Hanover street, 75 feet north of Partridge Lane, and that trees are overhanging his property from the Meusdorffer property. This matter was referred to Councilman Sundermann.

The park committee reported that an investigation has been made of the playground apparatus in the park and that it was found that the apparatus is within all rules of safety regulations. The committee explained that this being the first equipment of this kind installed here, the children appeared a little over anxious, and were not as careful as they might be when they have become more accustomed to the swings, slides, etc. It was the decision of the committee to let the matter rest at present, with the expectation that the equipment will prove satisfactory to all.

The police department was instructed to see that all children are out of the park by 9 p. m. every evening.

The Christmas tree committee reported that the Christmas tree festivities were a marked success, and it seemed as if the fine weather of the evening was made to order for the occasion. A motion prevailed thanking every one who helped and took part in the celebration, especially Chief J. J. Kennedy, who spent a great deal of time getting the Christmas tree installed and so well lighted.

In adjourning, Mayor H. H. Smith, in behalf of the City Council, wished each and every citizen of Daly City a very merry Christmas and a happy New Year, and expressed the hope that the coming year would be as harmonious as the previous years.

LOCAL CAMP FIRE GIRLS HAVE CHRISTMAS PARTY

The Daly City Camp Fire Girls held a delightful Christmas party last Monday evening at the home of the Misses Dorothy and Gladys Eldrup, of Roosevelt avenue. The evening was pleasantly spent in dancing and playing games, after which Santa Claus arrived and distributed gifts to all the guests. Dainty refreshments were served to the following: Miss Katharine McKeown, Helen Reinhart, LaVita Hicks, Irene Malokouski, Gladys Eldrup, Marion Mansfelt, Gladys Oakley, Helen Waite, Eleanor Bodien, Helen Knoll, Lillian Prescot, Theresa Compagnia, Lillian Crawford, Charlotte Godfrey, May Swan, Louise Nittle and Dorothy Eldrup.

COMPANY NO. 3 ENJOYS ANNUAL BIRTHDAY DINNER

Thursday evening of last week the members of Fire Company No. 3 held their customary birthday dinner at their fire house on Westlake avenue, celebrating with a delicious turkey dinner in honor of Ed Ford and Paul Selmi, who recently celebrated their birthdays. The turkey, furnished by Traffic Officer Otto Schramm, was served with all that goes to make a dinner complete to all the members, it being the first time all members were able to attend the birthday dinner.

FIREMEN ENTERTAIN

The members of Company No. 3, Daly City Volunteer Fire Department, entertained their families last Saturday evening at the fire house on Westlake avenue at a delightful Christmas party. There was a huge tree, Santa Claus and gifts for the little children. The evening was spent in dancing, after which refreshments were served to about 150 guests.

Charged With Grand Theft

Chief Doyle and Officer Sunderland, with the assistance of San Francisco officers, placed Eugene Gfroerer, of 269 Los Olivos avenue, under arrest last Thursday, he being charged with grand theft, the warrant being sworn to in San Francisco. He was turned over to the San Francisco police department.

The Setting Sun

JEFFERSON STARS WIN, 18-3, SUNDAY

The Jefferson All Stars' pitchers, Thompson and Keagle, turned in their best exhibition so far this season last Sunday to defeat the Jewel City aggregation, 18 to 3, at Fleishacker's park.

Thompson, the All Stars' starting chucker, pitched four innings. This was his first game with the local nine and he made a fine impression, allowing only one hit. Keagle and McArdle replaced Thompson and Strand in the fifth frame. Gene displayed some of his old time form, striking out ten men and allowing only four hits.

The All Stars clouted the ball all over the lot to collect a total of seventeen hits. C. Aiello, the fleet-footed second baseman, garnered four singles in six trips to the plate to lead the attack. Drucker and Doyle fattened their batting averages by hitting safely three times each. One of Joe's hits was a triple.

Lagomarsino, Plansky and Kennedy, the All Stars outfielders, continued to play errorless ball. Lloyd showed his ability as a fly chaser by snaring a difficult foul ball in the first inning.

SUPERVISORS UNANIMOUS ABOUT COAST HIGHWAY

From the Half Moon Bay Review.

At the recent meeting of the Coastside Civic Union, the five supervisiors of San Mateo county were present and expressed, each, their personal view about the building of the first unit of the boulevard from San Francisco to Santa Cruz. This first unit is to be a six mile stretch around San Pedro mountain in San Mateo county.

Supervisor Rosalie Brown said that she was greatly interested in the road. Dr. C. V. Thompson of Pescadero declared himself 100 per cent in favor of it. Supervisor John Poole of Redwood City, stated that he was personally interested and added "that the public could bank on me." Supervisor Thomas L. Hickey announced that he has sufficent money in his district to keep up his end of the road. As to Supervisor Manuel Francis, the public on the Coastside is well aware of the hard work he has accomplished in order to obtain these results.

The entier board of supervisors of this county pledged a united effort regarding the building of this unit of the coast boulevard. With this assurance, there should not be much of a delay in the actual construction of it.

The coastside owes the board of supervisors of this county a debt of gratitude for their moral support and help and to their own representative a recognition of his great and patient efforts.

MOTORISTS SECURING NEW LICENSE PLATES

Motorists have started off with a rush for their 1930 license plates, according to the California State Automobile Association, which is co-operating with the State Motor Vehicle Division by issuance of plates to over 90,000 members. Members of the motoring organization and visiting motorists from other states will be supplied with plates on application at Association headquarters in San Francisco or any of thirty district offices in as many cities.

The big job of distributing two million license renewals is well under way, and will continue until midnight, January 15. Motorists are advised to lose no time in getting their new plates, as the crowds will increase as the time limit shortens.

Carelessness on the part of motorists enriched the state of California by nearly $250,000 last year, which was assessed in penalties to car owners who failed to apply for their plates within the time required by law.

"Shop early for license plates" is the suggestion of the Automobile Association, since after January 15, motorists who operate their cars without the 1930 plates, or without evidence of having applied for new plates, will be subject to arrest and fine for misdemeanor violation of the law.

After January 31, in addition to being liable to arrest and fine, they will also be obliged to pay a penalty of 100 per cent increase of registration fee. This means that every motor vehicle owner who is delinquent will be liable to fine after January 15, and will have to pay a fine if apprehended, and also double the registration fee after January 31.

The fee is $3 for passenger cars, and there is a graduated weight scale in addition for commercial vehicles.

Under all ordinary circumstances, application of renewal is made by presentation of the 1929 white certificate of registration, with the address correctly stated.

Present the pink certificate of ownership if the white slip is lost or mutilated, and apply for a duplicate white, for which the state charges an extra fee of 50 cents.

Present both white and pink certificates if there is a change of legal ownership to be recorded. This involves an additional fee of one dollar.

BROTHERS ENGAGE IN FIGHT OVER PIG

A fight over a pig last Friday resulted in one man going to jail in Redwood City and another to the hospital. The men were Henry and Rudolph Mitcheli, brothers. The fight, it seems, began when Henry began shooting a pig. Both brothers raise hogs, and Rupert claimed the particular pig selected by Henry for shooting.

The fight ended when Henry swung the rifle and clipped Rudolph on the head. Later Sheriff McGrath and Deupty Sheriff Neri called on Henry and took him to jail, where he was charged with assault with a deadly weapon. His bail was fixed at $5,000 cash or $10,000 bond.

Mr. and Mrs. Childers Entertain

Mr. and Mrs. R. Childers, of 69 Oliver street, entertained at dinner Christmas day, having as their guests Mrs. Jean O'Rourk, Harvey Skirvin, Harold, Allan and Ivan Childers. On Christmas evening, Mr. and Mrs. Childers entertained several guests. Those enjoying their hospitality were Mrs. Rose Bernard and son Robert and Judge L. Kinnel and wife, of San Mateo, Dr. Ray Olmo, Chris Olmo and Miss Bernice Cummings, of San Francisco, Mrs. Jean O'Rourk, Miss Beula O'Rourk and Otto Schramm, of Daly City, and Mr. and Mrs. J. Wallace, of San Bruno.

HONOR HAPPILY MARRIED COUPLE

Last Saturday evening Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Cochran, of 141 Los Banos avenue, celebrated the twentieth anniversary of their wedding by giving a dinner party at Bimbo's restaurant, San Francisco.

At first, there was a reception at the home, where the guests assembled and presented their offerings typical of the occasion. The assortment was humorous, sentimental and useful, and greatly appreciated.

Arriving at Bimbo's the guests found the tables well laden and arranged invitingly, a commodious dance floor, and musicians able and friendly.

When all had located their placecards, W. J. Savage was named the toastmaster, and he nominated Mayor H. H. Smith as his first assistant.

While the different courses were being served and the program of dances enjoyed, the toastmaster, after announcing his best wishes, said that the prominent of both San Francisco and Daly City were present, and that consequently much could be expected; and before the last dance took place everyone had been called upon and had spoken complimentarily of Mr. and Mrs. Cochran. All of them congratulated the happy couple for having stood so well the fair and the otherwise weather of twenty years, and bespoke for them as many more, abounding in happiness and prosperity. The pleasure of the gathering was so pronounced that the hour of parting came all too soon.

The following were among the guests: Mayor and Mrs. H. H. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Kelly, Mrs. Mary White, Mr. and Mrs. J. Metcalf, Mr. and Mrs. Sill, Mr. T. Matzek, Mrs. Hopman, Mrs. Rollins, Mr. Graham, Mrs. Jackson, Mr. E. Barnard, Mr. Green, Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Cochran, Mr. and Mrs. Warren O. White, Mr. and Mrs. Tamlin, Mr. and Mrs. McKay, Mr. Hansen, Mr. Hutchison, Mr. and Mrs. Jochumbsen, Mrs. Arunde, Mr. D. Hurel, Miss C. Murphy, Mr. Earl Cochran, Miss Babe Sill, Mr. Venice Cochran, Mr. Clifford Gerlack, and Mr. W. J. Savage.

THREE SENTENCED TO PRISON FOR ROBBERY

Three men charged with a number of burglaries on the peninsula went before Police Judge Edward I. McAuliffe at Redwood City last Monday for hearing, and all three were held to answer to the Superior Court. The men were Oliver Hammond, Richard Rivera and William Sepulveda.

The three men are charged with having committed a number of burglaries in Redwood City, including the homes of R. Spencer, manager of the Skaggs Safeway store, and of Bert Smith, wire chief of the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Co. Burglaries committed in Santa Clara county are also believed to have been the work of the same men. All three were arrested in San Francisco and brought to San Mateo county for trial.

Within a few hours after their preliminary hearing the men were taken to the Superior Court, where all three entered pleas of guilty. They were sentenced immediately by Judge Buck. The sentence in each case was from one to fourteen years in prison.

CALIFORNIA TOWN ADOPTS DRY LAW TEN YEARS AFTER

A news item from Doris, California, recently published, says: After trying prohibition for ten years, Dorris has adopted local option and "gone dry."

Don't laugh, for this is no joking matter. Heretofore, Dorris, Macdoel and other mountain towns hereabouts believed that to attract the trade of lumberjacks they must be "wide open." Consequently several saloons and gambling joints flourished.

Once every blue moon the federal agents would stage a raid, but because of the expense of conducting trials in far away seats of government, these raids were few and far-between.

So recently the town council of Dorris voted that the town must conform to the prohibition law. Henceforth, no more will whiskey be served over the bar, and all gambling will cease.

DAMAGE SUIT AGAINST WRITERS COMPROMISED

Judge George H. Buck last Monday accepted the petition of Theodore Cheney to compromise the claim of Carlisle Cheney for damages against Charles G. Norris and his wife, Kathleen Norris, noted writers. The suit was the result of an accident which occurred when the youth, riding a motorcycle, collided with a car belonging to Mrs. Norris and driven by Al Green, also named as defendant in the action. The case was compromised for $250.

SAN MATEO PORT COMPLETES CHAIN

It is announced that with the completion of the San Mateo airport and flying school of the Curtiss-Wright Flying Service, the farthest west school of a nation-wide chain of schools will be opened for service.

From Bar Harbor, Maine, in the northeast, to Florida and west to California are spread the forty flying schools of the service, each one a counterpart of the other and offering the most complete system of training in aviation.

Long before the schools were in operation, the service engaged in an extensive research of training plans approved by the army and navy for a practical and thorough system of training adaptable to the standards of the Department of Commerce and the present day demand for scientifically trained aviators.

At Detroit a normal schol of training for pilot instructors has been established.

AMERICAN LEGION HAS CONSERVATION PLAN

Initiating a comprehensive conservation program affecting the natural resources of California, department heads of the American Legion in this state have outlined work to be done in connection with the program for the three hundred and sixty-six Posts of the World War Veterans' organization in the various counties.

Under the direction of Eugene D. Bennett, of San Francisco, chairman of the Legion's conservation committee, the veterans of San Francisco will co-operate with the state and federal governments and with the various sportsmen's and conservation societies in the following manner through the organization of local units:

1. Prevention of forest and brush fires in contiguous localities by an educational program and by physical aid in times of emergency.
2. Adopt or plant memorial groves of trees and assist the program of beautifying the state's highways by initiating or supervising the planting of shade trees.
3. Assist in the establishment and maintenance of community arbors or sanctuaries for birds and wild life.
4. Organize Post crews for the planting of fish and liberation of game birds raised and furnished by the state. (This assistance is needed and will be greatly beneficial.)
5. Assist by educational and other effective means in the observance of laws for the protection of game and wild life.
6. Preservation of our beaches and public parks from polution, spoilation and desecration.
7. Contact and co-operate with the various conservation organizations, both official and unofficial, in the general program of conservation.
8. Study and consider the important legislative propositions affecting conservation, with the view of intelligently lending the Legion's support or voicing its opposition to vital matters affecting the welfare of the natural resources of the state.

GOLD STAR MOTHERS' PILGRIMAGE PLANNED

Gold Star mothers of the nation or widows of men who gave their lives overseas during the World War will be permitted to be accompaied by friends on the journey abroad but arrangements for passage on steamships cannot be made by the War Department at Washington for such friends, according to a notice received by James K. Fisk, State Adjutant of the American Legion.

"The War Department has no authority under the existing law to make arrangements for the friends of Gold Star Mothers or widows but the Gold Star Mothers or widow will be notified of the boat and the date of sailing sufficiently in advance so that any persons desiring to accompany her may make their own arrangements with the transportation company operating the ship," Fisk points out. "Of course", he says, "such persons will have to pay their own expenses."

UNEMPLOYMENT LESS SEVERE THIS YEAR THAN EVER BEFORE

Unemployment this year is less severe than ever before in California, particularly in the manufacturing industries.

Will J. French, director of industrial relations, told Governor Young recently that 720 establishments employed 163,062 workers in October, 1928, while in the same month this year the employees totaled 170,314, an increase of 7,252, or 4.4 per cent. The weekly payrool for the month last year was $4,898,338, while this year it was $5,254,303, an increase of $355,965 or 7.2 per cent.

SIDELIGHTS

A Maryland legislator thinks some of the laws on the statute books of his state are rather out of date, and suggests their repeal. For example, one law forbids drivers of horse-drawn street cars working more than twelve hours a day; another makes it unlawful to feed slaves on terrapin more than once a week.

"Never too old to learn," appears to be the motto of John P. Courtney of Los Angeles. He was admitted to the bar on his golden wedding anniversary, at the age of 74, after passing a creditable examination.

An instance of keeping cool under difficulties is reported from Des Moines. A hot bearing on the big press of a daily newspaper threatened to delay publication, when Henry Puffer, a pressman, came to the rescue by holding a 100-pound cake of ice against the bearing for an hour, until the run was finished.

Charles Loon, a fullblooded Menominee Indian of Dixon, Ill., illustrated how looney he was when he brought a "charm-stick," trimmed with gay feathers, into court when arraigned on a robbery charge. He declared it would keep away bad spirits and insure his acquittal. But the jury, not susceptible to "charms," found him guilty.

When Mrs. Harry Cole, of Chepewa Falls, Wis., cared for an injured collie five years ago, she did better than she knew. Recently the dog twice saved the life of her little son Robert, once by dragging him out of the way of an approaching automobile, and again by giving the alarm when the room in which the child was playing caught fire.

Here's a good word for the much abused co-eds. Prof. Doyle of George Washington University declares that the influence of girls on the campus makes the male students more careful of their personal appearance and conduct.

The first merchant's advertisement ever printed in a newspaper in America appeared in the Boston News-Letter on August 21, 1704. Here it is in full: "At Mr. John Mice, Merchant, his Warehouse upon the Dock in Boston, There is to be Sold good Cordage of all sizes, from a Spun-yard to Cables of 13 inches, by wholesale or retail."

Leopold Stockowski, famed director of the Philadelphia symphony orchestra, does not like hand-clapping from the audience, contending that it is a barbarous practice which diverts attention from the beauties of the music. He recently made a speech to his assembled listeners, stressing this view. His speech was greeted with loud hand-clapping.

Certain Senators of limited length of service, who recently tried to take charge of the legislative program, were dubbed "Young Turks" and "Boy Scouts" by their colleagues. The average age of the youngsters was but 56.

A Bloomington, Indiana, barber recently paid the penalty for undue enthusiasm. A cowd of Indiana University students pledged themselves not to shave until their team won a conference game. The barber agreed to shave them free when the team won. Indiana's victory over Northwestern gave the barber such a rush of free business that he nearly collapsed.

Spanish, like English, contains many words in which a very slight variation in pronunciation makes a wide divergance in meaning. Governor Roosevelt of Porto Rico, addressing a native audience in his recently imperfectly acquired Spanish, intended to refer to General Parker as a bachelor, but inctead called him a tapeworm.

Several cases have been reported lately from Canada in which persons attacked by bears have saved their lives by falling down and pretending to be dead. In fact, this is said to be the only safe procedure. But we doubt that it would work if the intended victim were a Wall Street bull.

A book entitled "Etiquette of the Ballroom," published in London in 1860, contains some suggestions which are in part applicable even in the present day, among them being this: "The practice of chewing tobacco and spitting on the floor is not only nauseous to ladies but injurious to their gowns." Of course, the gowns would not necessarily suffer nowadays.

Some of our professional reformers might take a gentle hint from a schoolboy's essay on Socrates. The boy wrote: "Socrates was a great man. He was sort of a tramp. He went around telling people what to do, and they poisoned him."

Two Toronto University professors have perfected a new anesthetic which is said to be preferable to ether or chloroform. It is a gas called cyclopropane.

An economical means of purifying large quantities of water by the use of a silver compound has been developed in Germany.

A lock for automobiles which works automatically when the ignition is turned off has been invented by a burglar convict.

A huge crane in Portland, Oregon, was used to launch a steel tug 65 feet long.

Some Christmas club savers may have saved enough to pay the final installments on last year's presents.

The entire Personnel of the Daly City Theatre wish you a Happy New Year

By J. H. NEUSTADT

The number of licenses to fish and hunt has doubled in the last ten years and it is safe to estimate that within the next ten years this growth will be repeated.

The above is based on the assumption that there will be fish and game left to induce the young men of that time to justify calling hunting and fishing a sport.

A few years ago schools of albacore were seen in the vicinity of Catalina, covering waters five miles square, tuna and deep sea cod in abundance, sword fish and the larger denizens of the sea in like quantities.

Today the rod record for 1929 is five albacore and two sword fish, and the sport that attracted thousands of tourists to Southern California waters is gone.

President Hoover was a guest some time since of the Tuna Club of Los Angeles and after cruising nearly all day to get tuna or albacore, returned to port without a single strike.

At one time there were at Avalon between one and two hundred fishing launches, and today there are six, and these are not making a living.

The canneries used to get their full supply in these waters, and today they are compelled to operate refrigerator ships 250 feet long and obtain their supplies off the coast of Mexico.

Citizens, whether sportsmen or not, should interest themselves in conservation and encourage the fish and game clubs to continue their efforts to conserve what is left, and propogate more, or the next generation will be denied the taste of fish and one of most valuable foods gone.

The state realizes this, hence the money expended for hatcheries, fish ladders, rearing ponds and importations, and the services of many hundreds of employes, all engoged in saving what we have left within legal limits, and in the effort to artficially produce more.

Game is going the same route. Ten years ago quail was five times plentiful as today.

And when the writer talks to old-timers as to what was, and compares it with what is, his heart palpitates for the future.

San Mateo county men, the boys of a few years ago could depend upon a creel full of ocean fish after every trip, but today quite frequently the catch is of less weight than the bait.

Herein lies the moral: Endorse and assist the good work of the conservationists and the work of the commission.

The coot was hunted under a host of names in that day as now. It was called the mud hen, marsh hen, pond hen ,water hen, sea crow and crow duck. Despite its unflattering names, however, it was held in high esteem for the excellence of its flesh, especially when fattened in the rice fields.

Our ambassador to Great Britain is an ardent conservationist. Read below what he recently wrote:

"The conservation movement in the United States today constitutes this country's finest demonstration of pure idealism of unselfish patriotism.

"Those who adhere to it solely for the love of out of doors, who comprehend their duty only in terms of planting trees, purifying a stream, protecting a bird's nest, or otherwise making the out of doors a little cleaner, a little more beautiful, and a little more alive with the pulse of nature, have justification enough for their work and reward enough in their accomplishments.

"On economic grounsd alone we may call upon the self-interest of our people and justify all the time and the energy that is expended in a conservation movement."

Wild song and game birds protected by closed seasons are enjoying a more secluded peace this summer in Kentucky. The law holding a father responsible for the action of a minor child brought the boon to wild life.

Recently a father was arrested in Ashland when his son shot a robin. The father was fined $15 and costs. News of the drastic action was carried by the state press. Since, the birds and small animals have not been molested.

Boys have been killing song birds despite warnings of authorities. The County Fish and Game Protective Association brought the test case before a magistrate.

Ashland has a bird refuge of 50 acres. By erecting bird houses, scattering feed, and killing hawks and owls, have caused the bird population to increase many fold. Voices of thousands of song birds greet the dawn to the delight of the citizens.

YELLOW PINE IS POPULAR FOR TELEPHONE POLE USE

Of the total number of telephone poles purchased by the Bell System during 1927, yellow pine was the most popular species, comprising slightly over 40 per cent of the entire number. Next came chestnut, with 19 per cent, followed by northern white cedar and western red cedar with 18 and 17 per cent, respectively. These four varieties are the chief types of poles used in the Bell System, but other species are used to a limited extent, particularly in certain areas. Among the other kinds of poles that are used are Maine cedar, lodge pole pine, cypress, redwood, southern red cedar and juniper.

NEW HEART STIMULANT

Another discovery which may prove a great boon to humanity is reported from Calcutta by the noted Indian scientist, Sir Jagadish Bose, who claims to have developed a powerful heart stimulant which has restored life after all heart action had ceased.

The new drug is derived from a plant found in the Himalaya mountains, and its discoverer predicts that it will in time supersede such heart stimulants as strychnine and digitalis.

Information concerning the new stimulant is as yet meager, but Sir Jagadish's scientific reputation is said to be such as to inspire confidence that a most valuable therapeutic agent has been developed.

Commander Byrd is an American by birth, but his ways are quite Polish.

It would also be enlightening if psychologists would tell us how they get that way themselves.

"Well," I said, "that means that I've got about half an hour to disguise a family meal as a company dinner—"

"Don't bother," she interrupted. "They won't be here for luncheon—dinner. I need to see them only about ten minutes."

I didn't bother—answering. If she didn't know any more about the ways of people in this country than that, I didn't see why I should take it on myself to teach her.

But she was right. She talked to them a few minutes; and, though I insisted that they stay for dinner, off they went. It was an insult to the Desert Moon ranch. Every one on the place, but Miss MacDonald, knew it. Two weeks before, if a couple of friends had left the ranch at eleven-thirty in the morning, with no reasonable excuse for so doing, Sam would have blown up and burst with rage. That noon he was not even decently indignantly interested.

He had plenty of interest, though, concerning the finding of the attic key. He had had it all settled, and was satisfied that, since it had been proven that Gaby had been killed on the stairway, it had also been proven that no member of the household could have been implicated. Now this second key coming to light, the key that must have been put over back of the wood before the fire was lighted that night, and that must have been blackened in that one fire, because there had been no fire in that fireplace since, dragged, to quote Sam, not wishing to use such words on my own hook, "Every d—n one of us back into the d—n mess again."

"Sam," I said, and I guess my only excuse is that I was still angry at having my honest word doubted, "do you know what I think? I think that Miss MacDonald—though land knows she is a nice girl, and a living wonder as help in the kitchen and around the house—is going to be a flat fizzle from start to finish when it comes to discovering the murderer."

"That's kind of the way I got it sized up, too," Sam said. "But if she's good help to you, she's worth a lot more than her expenses."

"It isn't the cost of her," I said. "I'm afraid she is going to do a lot of harm around here."

"Goodnight, Mary!" he said. "If anyone can do any more harm around here than has been done already—why, leave 'em do it."

"Not much with your 'leave 'em do its,'" I said. "My idea is that we've had about enough trouble. What I'm getting at is this, Sam: I think that fool girl, at present, is suspecting you more than any other one of us."

"That's the way I had that sized up, too," he said. "But let her go ahead. If she can prove I'm guilty, I'm willing to hang for it."

"Don't be a fool, Sam," I snapped. "Did you ever happen to hear of circumstantial evidence?"

"You bet. But they can't hang more than one innocent person on circumstantial evidence, and there's enough of that stuff around here now to hang about five or six of us. I'll take my chances with the rest of you, Mary."

"Lands, Sam," I was taken aback, "do you think she suspects me?"

Something pretty close to the old twinkle came into Sam's eyes. "Well, Mary, Gaby was one extra to do for and she came late to meals and pestered you quite a lot. Furthermore,

"Does It Seem to You That Danny and Canneziano Are Getting Along All Right?"

though it hasn't been made a point of, you were all alone in the kitchen for the hour between five and six o'clock. You might have slipped up and have done the deed between the time you put the meat on and took the biscuits out."

I knew that he thought he was being funny; but I didn't like it. "See here, Sam," I began, "Danny was going back and forth all the time—"

"'Now then,'" Sam interrupted, mocking Miss MacDonald. "Did Miss Canneziano have any particular reason for watching you? No. I see. Then, I am afraid, she can not be positive that you were not out of the kitchen. Twenty minutes often seems like two hours and sixteen minutes—I'll tell you what, Mary," Sam got suddenly serious. "I'm going to wait a few more days, and then if this lady isn't progressing a deal faster than she is at present, I'm going to pay her off, full amount, of course, and wire to 'Frisco for a plain, ordinary, he-man detective to come up here and take hold of things. By the way," he went on, "does it seem to you that Danny and Canneziano are getting along all right?"

"I judge it isn't a case of their getting along, much," I said. "So far as I know, she hasn't spoken a word to him since she greeted him the evening she came home."

"Well," he hesitated, "well—I know a mite further than that. I'll tell you, some time that isn't dinner time—maybe."

He went into the dining room, and I followed him.

All during that dinner, and the same had been true of every meal since the first breakfast I've mentioned, John hardly took his eyes off of Miss MacDonald. I made a way to speak to him about it, alone, right after dinner.

"John," I said, "for mercy's sakes, what do you want to sit and stare at Miss MacDonald for, during meals, like she was the place where you had lost something?"

He blushed. "Gosh, Mary! I haven't been doing that, have I?"

"You certainly have. It doesn't look nice, John. Why do you do it?"

"I didn't know that I did. But, on the square, did you ever see anything as pretty—I mean, as clean and—well, kind of comforting looking? She changes so, too; like a diamond, or a desert, or a sunrise, or—something. Did you ever see anyone as interesting to look at, Mary?"

"Never mind asking me," I said. "Just you go and ask Danny some of those questions."

"Danny," he answered, "is—well, Danny is Danny, of course. She's different."

"Better take to watching how different she is," I advised, and left him to think it over, and went into the living room.

Canneziano was loafing around in there. "Mary," he said, "I'll make a dicker with you."

"Not with me," I said, and started up the stairs.

Curiosity like mine is a curse. I'd gone about four steps up when it caught me. "What's your old dicker?" I said.

"If you'll persuade Sam to give me the ten thousand for producing the murderer, I'll split it with you."

I am tired of apologizing for myself. I will state, merely, that I managed to say the one thing, under those circumstances, that I should not have said. "Do you know who the murderer is?" Thereby proving that I was possessed of about as much diplomacy as an alarm clock.

"Certainly not," he answered. He had not hesitated; he had looked straight into my eyes. But I knew that he believed that I thought he had lied.

"See here," I said. "I take it that one five thousand dollars is as good to you as another. If you know who committed the murder, and will produce him, I'll give you the five thousand dollars myself."

"Don't say that, Mary," Danny stepped out from behind the long curtains at the end of the south windows.

Canneziano jumped like a spurred bronco. "Spying, eh, my lady?"

She spoke directly to me. "Listen, Mary; don't ever, for any reason, enter into any sort of an agreement with this man. If he knows, or thinks that he knows, who the murderer is, he can be forced to tell without a bribe. If he had known for one day, one hour, and had withheld the information, he is, in effect, an accomplice—there is a legal term for it, but I have forgotten it. I am going out, now, to find Uncle Sam, and to bring him here and tell him that this man says that he knows who committed the murder. Mary, you telephone to the sheriff in Telko—"

"Just a moment, please," Canneziano spoke smoothly and smilingly. "I have said, definitely, that I do not know who killed Gaby. And—I do not know. I am bored, unspeakably bored. I should like to try my hand at detecting this—er, villian. But," he shrugged his narrow shoulders, "with no impetus—"

"The fact that she was your own daughter—" I began, hotly.

"Don't, Mary," Danny interrupted, with a sigh. "There is no use. You and he do not speak the same language."

"How is this?" Canneziano said, and went on speaking, very rapidly, in some foreign language.

Danny stood and stared at him without a mite of expression on her face. He paused for breath. She said, "I have forgotten my Italian. I do not understand you, and I am glad I do not. Come, Mary, shall we go upstairs?"

In the upper hall she said that she wanted me to go with her to Miss MacDonald, because she wanted to tell Miss MacDonald what had just happened.

We knocked on her door. She greeted us pleasantly enough, but there was a pucker between her eyebrows.

"You have asked us," Danny began at once, "to tell you nothing about the case. Does that mean that you do not wish to have us tell you of day by day developments, which seem to have a direct bearing on the case?"

"As, for instance?" Miss MacDonald questioned.

Danny told her about what had happened, from the time she had stepped behind the curtains, until she and I had come upstairs together.

Miss MacDonald's first question was, "Why were you watching him?"

"Because," Danny answered, straight, "I think he came here with some evil purpose. I should like to find out what that purpose is."

"Why were you so eager to prevent Mrs. Magin's making a pact with him?"

"I have dealt with this man, I know that he is bad and crafty. For five thousand dollars he would perjure himself over and over again. He would produce witnesses who would perjure themselves."

"Has this man approached you with offers similar to this one, Miss Canneziano?"

"He has had no opportunity."

"You are sure of that?"

Danny's chin went up a trifle. "I don't understand."

"I think that you do."

Danny turned to me. "Mary," she said, "yesterday afternoon that man came to my room when I was alone. He slipped in, closed my door, and locked it. I ran into Gaby's room, but I could not get out of it because the doors were all locked. I went into Gaby's bathroom and locked myself in. I stayed there for half an hour, or longer, until he left. Miss MacDonald evidently thinks that he and I were in conversation during that time. I have no proof that we weren't. Do you believe me, Mary?"

"I do, with all my heart," I said.

Miss MacDonald persisted. "You told no one about this?"

"I did not dare to tell. If John thought that that man—" She stopped short.

"Yes?" questioned Miss MacDonald.

"I mean that John would fight with him; would whip him within an inch of his life."

"Why should you care?"

Danny look at me.

"She'd care," I said, answering the appeal in her big, hurt eyes, "because she is a woman, Miss MacDonald. It may be hard for you to understand; but women, who aren't crime analysts, don't want their men fighting."

"Thank you, Mary," Danny said, and walked hurriedly out of the room.

"Mrs. Magin," Miss MacDonald began, right off the minute the door had closed behind Danny, "I want to ask you to help me with this case."

"I couldn't be any help to you," I said. I guess I was rather tart about it.

"Why not?"

"One reason is," I said, "that anybody who doesn't know any better than to suspicion Danny, in this affair, would need a lot more help, to get anywhere, than I could give them."

"My only suspicion concerning Miss Canneziano," she answered, "is that she knows more than she is willing to tell I may be wrong about that. Have you any other reason for refusing to help me?"

"Only that you don't believe a word I say. If you would consider that I am, anyway, trying to be honest, and if you'd do the same with the others, until you are sure that you have reason to do otherwise, I'd consider it an honor to help you, and I'd thank you kindly. I'd be no use to you, as long as you doubted every word I said. If I know that you are believing that I'll help, and tell the truth, I'll try to. If I think I am to be doubted, anyway, maybe I'll say what I'd like to say."

She sat and looked straight at me for at least half a minute. "I do believe you," she said, "and trust you. I have, since I first met you at the station. I can't help myself. You're all right, Mrs. Magin, and I know it. I'll agree to your terms. Now then: As my assistant, is there anyone on the place who would benefit in any way by Mr. Stanley's conviction?"

"In a way," I said, though it all but choked me, "John would. He is to inherit everything Sam has. But John loves Sam. And John didn't do it."

"Miss Canneziano would also benefit, then, wouldn't she, since she is to marry young Mr. Stanley?"

"It doesn't make sense," I said. "John has plenty of his own, right now; and Sam would give them anything and everything they wanted besides, as long as he lived."

"Is there," she asked, next, "any person at present on the ranch whom you would concede might, possibly, commit a murder?"

"Canneziano."

"Yes, I know. And leaving him out of it?"

"Well," I had to hesitate, "I am not sure. Every instinct I have tells me that neither Hubert Hand nor Mrs. Ricker— No. It is an awful thing to say; but, do you know, Gabrielle Canneziano herself was the only other person who has been on this ranch whom I could even imagine doing such a terrible thing. She didn't have any of the decent, ordinary virtues. She didn't know anything about them. Not charity, nor gratitude, nor kindness, nor honesty, nor modesty, nor—nor anything."

"Isn't it strange that twin sisters, who looked as much alike as these girls did, should be so entirely different as to character?"

"Strange or not, it is true. In character those two girls were as different as night and day. I never even thought that they looked alike. Who told you that they did?"

"I have seen their photographs," she reminded me.

"Their photographs may look alike. They didn't."

"But they did," she insisted.

"I tell you," I said, "that they acted so differently, and dressed so differently, that there was not one bit of likeness."

"A most unusual state of affairs for duplicate twins. Miss Danielle Canneziano came here on a most doubtful errand; an errand that amounted to robbery, nothing else—"

"If you are accusing Danny—" I interrupted.

"Oh, I am not!" There was a flash of temper in that. "Making all allowances for mistakes in time, Miss Canneziano could not have committed the murder herself. But, suppose that her past was not as innocent and blameless as she would like to have you all think. Suppose that a revelation of all she knows, or suspects, concerning her sister's death, would also bring to light things that she cannot afford to have brought to light concerning herself. It is at least reasonable to think that she knows more than she is willing to tell.

"I wonder whether you noticed," she went on, "that coming up from the station I set a trap for Miss Canneziano. Just for an instant, I fancied that there was more fear than grief in her attitude toward meeting her father. I suggested, you remember, that she see him alone: I wanted to see whether she desired a private interview with him. Her prompt refusal made it evident that she had no secret to give to him, and expected to get none from him. That is in her favor. Still—

"Before you go now, since you have agreed to help me, do you mind if I direct a bit? I want you to keep one eye on Miss Canneziano. I want you to keep the other eye on Mr. Canneziano, Mr. Hand, and Mrs. Ricker. Will you do that?"

"One whole eye for Danny," I questioned, "and only a third of an eye for each of the others?"

"For the present," she smiled. "Will you do that?"

I said that I would. It was not until after dinner the next day, when I was resting in my own room, feeling as virtuous as the three monkeys, who see no evil, hear no evil, speak no evil, pleased as Punch over my failures of the past twenty-four hours, that I realized that I just naturally could not carry through a job that went as much against the grain as that job went.

We are, I thought, allowed to know some things—just simple, honest knowing. And I knew that keeping a suspicious eye on the girl who had said

"If You Are Accusing Danny—" I Interrupted.

"bless your heart" to me, on the evening of the second of July, was as sensible as sitting up for Santa Claus.

Some one knocked on my door, I answered the knock. Miss MacDonald, all smiles, was standing there.

"Let me come in," she said; and, as soon as my door was closed behind her, "A most fortunate thing has happened. Some one has been to my desk and has stolen the code letter."

I could manage nothing but an echo. "Fortunate!" I said.

"I had a careful copy of it, locked up, of course. I have been leaving the letter in plain sight on my desk for bait. Don't you see, Mary," she forgot her formality in her excitement, "this is the mistake I have been hoping for. I have found a beginning—at last. The letter could not have concerned anyone in this house except Miss Canneziano, her father, and, possibly, not probably, young Mr. Stanley."

"I guess," I said, "that was likely what you were wanted to think."

Her gray eyes questioned me.

"Supposing," I answered, "that Mrs. Ricker, or Hubert Hand, or anyone of us, wanted to get you clear off the track, suspecting especially Danny, could one of us do better than to steal the code letter?"

"My word!" she said. "And you, with a mind that works like that, spending your life doing cooking. All the same, it does prove one thing. That the murderer, or his close accomplice, is right here on the place, now."

"Chad's confession proved that. The key in the fireplace proved it, too."

"Dear me, no. Not conclusively. Now, let me see." She took a folded paper from the front of her dress. "Here is my copy of the letter. It does look a mess, doesn't it?"

I looked at the paper and read, as before.

"Paexzazlytp! f-y nyx ogrgrago, rn fgno atf jan j-asn, ahzgo zkg c-ahhalo, vkgt nyx clplzgf rg zkg kypulzae, zkaz nyx. . . ."

It surely looked a mess.

"The fact that it was writtten on the typewriter," she said, "makes me suspect that the typewriter may unwrite it for us."

I told her then what I had not thought to tell her before; about my having heard the typewriter going, slowly, in Gaby's room right after she had received the letter.

"Fine!" she said. "May I use the same typewriter that she used?"

We went together into Gaby's room.

"I should have thought you'd want to clean this room, first of all," I said.

"Mr. Stanley unlocked it for me that first night. I spent five or six very busy hours in here, and I slept here that night, too."

"Upon my soul! Doesn't that go to show? I'd have taken oath in any court that you spent the night in your own room."

"That is exactly it," she said. "Honest people are so sure that they know things, which they don't know at all, and that they have seen things, which they haven't seen."

I have wished, since, that I had said something else instead of saying, "Well, I might think I knew something which I didn't know; but I'd never mistake about what I had seen or had not seen."

"Perhaps not—" she said.

"Did you find anything in here that night?" I questioned.

Swastika Always Held Emblem of Good Luck

The swastika, which is the cross made by crossing two letter "Z's" has been the symbol of good luck for so long back that no reliable evidence has been preserved to indicate just why this particular ideograph should have its present significance. We do know that from time out of mind it has had this significance, and among peoples in all parts of the world excepting Africa, Polynesia, Australia and the polar regions.

The swastika as the good-luck symbol is found in China, Korea, Japan and India. As far back as in ancient Troy the swastika was used in this sense by the Myceneeans. It is found in relics of such widely separated peoples as those who inhabited Europe during the Bronze age, the Etruscans, the Indians of our own Colorado and Mexico, and among others of North American natives who antedated Columbus by at least ten centuries.

Another curiously significant fact is that in the Indian language the word "swastika" means good luck; while in ancient Sanscrit "swasti" means "hail" or "be well."—Kansas City Times.

Better Take a Taxi

"I never was so mortified!" exclaimed Mrs. Averdupois.

"Yeah? What happened?" asked her husband.

"I got on a street car today," said the lady of many pounds, "and a rather thin man got up to give me a seat, but as the man next to him wouldn't get up, too, I had to stand and listen to the rest of the passengers in the car snicker."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

In the Same Boat

Two friends met one day and began to discuss the various events which had taken place in their lives since last they met—a year ago.

"I've not done anything much at my job," said one. "I took a job as groom, and I've not had a minute's peace since!—on the go, day and night, and ordered about—"

"That's just how I've been treated!" broke in the other.

"You!" said the first, surprised. "How can you be putting up with my sort of life?—you never took on as a groom!"

"I did," said the other, gloomily. "I took on as a bridegroom!"

Such an Optimist

John Haynes Holmes says that any man who gets married has to sacrifice 50 per cent of his individual liberty. Thou optimist, John.—Camden Post.

Man seems to be deficient in nothing so much as he is in time.—Zeno.

On the Funny Side

A WHIZ THERE

"What experience have you had in writing 'business getter' letters?" asked the boss of the young man applying for a job.

"Well," he replied, "my father is a Scotchman and while in college I wrote him letters persuasive enough to pry him loose from money every time I wanted it."

"You'll do, name your own salary," said the boss.

Also a Cash Discount

The burglar had knocked the merchant unconscious. By the time the victim opened his eyes all the most expensive goods had been take outside and the burglar was standing beside him.

"You've got everything," groaned the merchant; "what are you waiting for?"

"What about trading stamps?"—Boston Transcript.

SHOULDN'T CREAK

Old Soak—"My, my, but my joints are stiff—they fairly creak." Friend—"That shouldn't be—you're always pretty well oiled."

Psychoanalysis

He was well psychoanalyzed,
A shorter path they cut,
And presently we were apprised
That he was just a "nut."

Prepared for Emergency

"What makes you keep giving me fish for dinner day after day," he inquired. "Are you particularly fond of it?"

"No," she replied, "I was wholly unselfish. I read a lovely recipe about how to remove a fish bone when it sticks in your throat and I wanted to try it."

An Inexpensive Substitute

Mrs. Pester—Titus Wadde may be stingy, but he's good to his family. I never see him out in his car without his baby.

Her Husband—That's to save the price of a horn. All he has to do is to pinch the kid and it lets out a howl.

CIRCULATING AGAIN

She—I don't think it's fair for you to keep such a lovely girl as Bessie away from all the other men.

He—Well, she's back in circulation again—I've given her up.

Melancholy Contrast

Creation's proudest work we see
In man, philosophy affirms.
And yet, at times, man seems to be
A playground for all sorts of germs.

Taking Ways

"How is your Emmy?"

"Dreadful! Last week she took the veil."

"But I didn't know she was so pious."

"No, I mean the veil that was stolen at the drapers."—Cologne. Lustige Kolner Zeitung.

His Clever Refusal

Poet—I think I shall call my new collections of poems "Secrets."

Publisher—Fine. An excellent idea! But please keep it to yourself.

Helped Swell the Total

NEW WAR SECRETARY

General satisfaction has been expressed over the appointment and confirmation of Patrick Jay Hurley of Oklahama as Secretary of War, to succeed the lamented Secretary Good.

Mr Hurley is one of the few men to occupy this important post who had seen actual military service, he having risen to the rank of lieutenant-colonel in France during the World War. He was assistant secretary under Secretary Good, so that his advancement is a promotion in the goverment service.

He is the youngest member of the cabinet, being only 46. But his 46 years have been busy ones. His activities have included several years of law practice at Tulsa, service as attorney for the Choctaw nation, service in the old Indian Territory Militia and in the Oklahoma National Guard, as well as in the A. E. F. and as colonel in the United States Reserve Corps.

He has been prominent in Oklahoma financial circles as president of one leading bank and director in another in his home city, and owner of important business buildings.

Secretary Hurley married the daughter of Admiral H. B. Wilson in 1919 and has three children, Patricia, Ruth and Wilson. In addition to his fine qualifications for his duties, he looks the part, having been recently described as "one of the handsomest men in public life."

CHRISTMAS LORE

Christmas is observed in commemoration of the birth of Jesus Christ, but it is really a day set apart for the celebration of an event, rather than an actual anniversary. While among the masses Christmas is supposed to be the birthday of the Savior, scholars and educated persons generally understand that the day, or even the year, of Christ's birth is not definitely known.

The date, December 25, approximates that of the Roman Saturnalia, the winter festival of the heathen Britons, the Scandinavian Yule and the later Roman festival of the sun-god Mithra.

Christmas having become through the centuries an almost universal festival, it is but natural that many odd customs and superstitions should have been connected with its observance in various countries and at various periods.

One of the oldest superstitions was that animals were endowed with the power of speech on Christmas. According to another, persons born on that day were destined to be lucky all their lives. A Polish version was that what one did on Christmas would govern his actions during the following year.

According to an ancient belief, each kind of evergreen used for decorative purposes at Christmastide conferred special blessings on those who passed under it. To pass under holly insured good fortune, bay denoted victory, while laurel imparted beauty and poetic skill. Horses were washed and bled on the day following Christmas, as a means of preserving them from harm.

The mythical Santa Claus has been known by many names—Kris Kringle. St. Nicholas, Knecht Ruprecht, Robin Goodfellow and others. In Germany, a Christmas visitor known as Krampus, an ugly dwarf, was supposed to carry off naughty children.

Christmas was not adopted as a regular festival by the Christian church until the fourth century, since which time its observance has spread throughout the civilized world, carrying its message of "Peace on earth; good-will toward men."

VERSATILE M. REVERE

Paul Revere is known to fame chiefly because of his historic ride from Boston to arouse the "minute men" on the night of April 18, 1775, before the engagement with the British at Lexington and Concord. But, aside from this notable exploit, he was an uncommonly active and versatile citizen.

He had taken part in the Boston Tea Party, and became a lieutenant-colonel during the Revolution, after serving as a lieutenant of artillery in the Crown Point expedition of 1756, during the French and Indian war.

In civil life he displayed a variety of talents which a recent biographer thinks entitles him to be known as America's first "jack of all trades." He was a goldsmith, a copper roller, a dentist, an engraver, a powder manufacturer, a maker of picture frames, a hardwars merchant, and, deplorable as it may seem, a seller of hard liquor.

Documents recently made public by his great-grandson include bills of lading showing that Paul Revere sold a consignment of rum at 60 cents a gallon, also gin at a proportionately low figure. This same great-grandson now heads a copper business founded by his distinguished ancestor, which still bears the name of Revere, in Boston.

But Revere's chief pride seems to have been in his dental skill, and he once sent a circular to prospective clients, which would be considered highly unethical today, in which among other things he said, referring to human teeth: "He fixes them in such a manner that they are not only an ornament, but of real use in speaking and eating."

Longfellow immortalized Paul Revere's ride, but he didn't tell the whole story.

WHY WOMEN ARE LATE

From time immemorial husbands have complained of the long time it took their wives to dress. Men have observed that women did not heed the flight of time, but carried on seemingly interminable telephone conversations without realizing how long they talked, and so on.

This apparent lack of regard for time by the fair sex has been the source of endless comment—often profane. But now it has all been explained, thanks to modern psychology.

Exhaustive tests conducted at the Johns Hopkins University show that women just naturally can't help it. They don't realize the meaning of "tempus fugit."

These tests developed the fact that women on an average estimate the time it takes them to perform a given task at about one-half the actual time required. Dr. Isabel Stewart, who conducted the tests, which were made with 1,084 students, both men and women, said:

Men estimate more accurately. The inaccuracies of women imply that time really seems shorter to women than to men."

Which recalls the joke of a paragrapher who wrote: "Married men do not live longer; it just seems longer."

By the way, what, if anything ever became of Prof. Scopes of "monkey trial" fame?

A TIMELY WARNING

Motorists are given some sound seasonable advice in recent bulletins issued by the National Safety Council, which includes cautions against carbon monoxide gas and other dangers. Among the admonitions given are these:

Beware of carbon monoxide gas by keeping garage open when you start your car. This gas is deadly, but you can neither see, smell nor taste it.

Have brakes tested frequently. When road is slippery don't apply brakes or step on the gas too suddenly. Take curves slowly. Watch out for car tracks. Be extremely cautious when passing schools, playgrounds and other places where children are running about.

In short,, use head, hands and feet to prevent accidents.

Correct this sentence: "Don't stop; it's only a dog-fight."

A NORTH DAKOTA IDEA

Something unusually fine in civic life is reported in an article by B. S. Palm of the Department of Agriculture, who tells of a community park for both town and rural people, established near Niagara, N. D.

This park is financed, owned, maintained and operated by representatives of the town and country population, who meet there on equal terms in a spirit of neighborliness for mutual enjoyment.

Chautauqua courses, athletic games and contests, picnics and various club and community meetings are held in the park, which is a real community center.

It is a splendid idea. It is an idea that ought to spread and be put into action throughout the land. The interests of town and country people are identical in the larger sense. They should fraternize more, become better acquainted, and develop a spirit of mutual helpfulness.

The people of Niagara and Grand Forks county have set a fine example for other communities to emulate.

A Texas paper records that Alex Shott and John Nott fought a pistol duel, in which, curiously enough, Nott was shot and Shott was not. In other words, the shot Shott shot shot Nott.

President Angell of Yale, who has great confidence in ambitious youth, says: "The boy who is determined to go to the devil will in all probability accomplish his purpose."

Multiplying Your Telephone's Convenience

WE ARE NOW in the midst of a cable-placing program for the Pacific Coast which, by 1933, will link cities from Canadian line to Mexican. This new lead-sheathed, storm-proof cable will multiply our city-to-city facilities in some cases twenty times over, besides improving clearness and sureness of out-of-town service to a marked degree.

Practically trouble-proof, and taking the place of hundreds of open wires, this new cable will make neighbors of all.

This cable-building program will cost about $30,000,000. It will increase the convenience of every telephone we serve.

"DISRAELI" MAKES HIT AT EMBASSY THEATRE

Patrons of the Embassy Theatre, San Francisco are voicing their approval of George Arliss in "Disraeli" in a most emphatic manner. This marvelous production is now in its second week at the Vitaphone house.

There are several highly dramatic scenes in this picture and every performance is marked by the enthusiastic response of the audience which applauds excitedly as Disraeli vanquishes all opposition in his battles against intrigue and cunning.

George Arliss is a living Benjamin Disraeli. It will be remembered that Disraeli is one of history's most colorful figures, whose greatest fight, as Prime Minister of England, was to gain control of the Suez Canal and thereby declare Queen Victoria Empress of India. It is this event which forms the basis for the story "Disraeli."

THREE POPULAR STARS AT THE DAVIES THEATRE

Three popular screen stars are now being seen and heard at the Davies Theatre, San Francisco, in "The Phantom in the House," an all talking thriller by Andrew Soutar. They are Henry B. Walthall, Nancy Welford and Ricardo Cortez, in a semi-melodramatic story of the "phantom" master of a disorganized home.

"The Phantom in the House" is not a ghost story. The plot centers around a struggling inventor who goes to prison for his wife's crime. Released after fifteen years, he returns home to find his socially ambitious wife is breaking up their daughter's love affair so that she can marry into nobility. Complications set in and it is not until after many thrills that he is able to accomplish his aim, to adjust the situation satisfactorily.

NEW WAR SECRETARY

General satisfaction has been expressed over the appointment and confirmation of Patrick Jay Hurley of Oklahama as Secretary of War, to succeed the lamented Secretary Good.

Mr Hurley is one of the few men to occupy this important post who had seen actual military service, he having risen to the rank of lieutenant-colonel in France during the World War. He was assistant secretary under Secretary Good, so that his advancement is a promotion in the goverment service.

He is the youngest member of the cabinet, being only 46. But his 46 years have been busy ones. His activities have included several years of law practice at Tulsa, service as attorney for the Choctaw nation, service in the old Indian Territory Militia and in the Oklahoma National Guard, as well as in the A. E. F. and as colonel in the United States Reserve Corps.

He has been prominent in Oklahoma financial circles as president of one leading bank and director in another in his home city, and owner of important business buildings.

Secretary Hurley married the daughter of Admiral H. B. Wilson in 1919 and has three children, Patricia, Ruth and Wilson. In addition to his fine qualifications for his duties, he looks the part, having been recently described as "one of the handsomest men in public life."

CHRISTMAS LORE

Christmas is observed in commemoration of the birth of Jesus Christ, but it is really a day set apart for the celebration of an event, rather than an actual anniversary. While among the masses Christmas is supposed to be the birthday of the Savior, scholars and educated persons generally understand that the day, or even the year, of Christ's birth is not definitely known.

The date, December 25, approximates that of the Roman Saturnalia, the winter festival of the heathen Britons, the Scandinavian Yule and the later Roman festival of the sun-god Mithra.

Christmas having become through the centuries an almost universal festival, it is but natural that many odd customs and superstitions should have been connected with its observance in various countries and at various periods.

One of the oldest superstitions was that animals were endowed with the power of speech on Christmas. According to another, persons born on that day were destined to be lucky all their lives. A Polish version was that what one did on Christmas would govern his actions during the following year.

According to an ancient belief, each kind of evergreen used for decorative purposes at Christmastide conferred special blessings on those who passed under it. To pass under holly insured good fortune, bay denoted victory, while laurel imparted beauty and poetic skill. Horses were washed and bled on the day following Christmas, as a means of preserving them from harm.

The mythical Santa Claus has been known by many names—Kris[illegible] of Kringle. spread "A great change has come over football," says an editorial in the Harvard-Yale official program magazine. "The slave driving coach is practically only a memory. The players are actually getting fun out of playing football. We know they are at Harvard, where practice has been shortened, where there is no high pressure driving of boys or no attempt to dodge the fact that a boy is entitled to the same courteous attention from coach that he is from professor or instructor."

One of the most remarkable records in football history came to an end with the Rutgers-N. Y. U. game when Bernie Crowl, captain and center of the Scarlet team, concluded his career. The Rutgers' captain had played forty-two successive football games with only forty seconds of substitution. He had completed thirty-seven without being relieved up to the Catholic university tilt, when Coach Harry Rockafellar removed him in order to give Karkakas, a substitute guard, varsity experience for next year. However, the tide turned against the Scarlet in the intervening forty seconds before the first half ended, and Crowl was sent back at the opening of the third period.

Boys who accept financial aid in return for services as college athletes are "false to the ethics of sportsmanship," declared Dr. Howard Savage, co-author of the Carnegie foundation's recent sensational report on recruiting and subsidizing, in an article in Sportsmanship.

College coaches and directors who induce them to do so are charged with "teaching young men dishonestly."

"For the abuses of recruiting and subsidizing which beset our college and school athletics the code of the sportsmanship brotherhood," Doctor Savage says, "suggests a powerful antidote: 'Keep faith in your comrade.'"

It has been estimated that because of encouragement given football stars to go through college that 10,000 boys avail themselves of the opportunity, where otherwise not one of them might ever get beyond the grade or high schools. Baseball, in the opinion of Jack Coombs, old-time pitcher with the A's, also encourages boys to attend college. He says:

"In recent years the major league clubs have come to depend considerably on the baseball stars developed in the colleges. The young fellows know this and feel that college baseball experience is helpful in getting big league jobs. So they're coming to college in increasing numbers, without any great encouragement excepting that they know they have a good opportunity of getting up in professional baseball after their schooling is completed."

Four Chicago backfield stars, Paul Stagg, Van Nice, Bluhm and Wattenberg, never played high or prep school football, and yet they were good enough to beat Princeton.

Basketball, introduced in Portugal in 1927, has made great strides.

Twenty-four teams are playing a regular schedule. Others are being organized. The main matches are played on Sunday before large crowds.

Competition in the game is so keen that a team is in training for the European championship contests. The Portuguese are confident of winning since some of their players learned the game in America and figured in important contests in the United States.

A TIMELY WARNING

Motorists are given some sound seasonable advice in recent bulletins issued by the National Safety Council, which includes cautions against carbon monoxide gas and other dangers. Among the admonitions given are these:

Beware of carbon monoxide gas by keeping garage open when you start your car. This gas is deadly, but you can neither see, smell nor taste it.

Have brakes tested frequently. When road is slippery don't apply brakes or step on the gas too suddenly. Take curves slowly. Watch out for car tracks. Be extremely cautious when passing schools, playgrounds and other places where children are running about.

In short,, use head, hands and feet to prevent accidents.

Correct this sentence: "Don't stop; it's only a dog-fight."

NOTICE OF TRUSTEE'S SALE

WHEREAS default has been made in the payment of the indebtedness secured by, and in the performance of the covenants contained in that certain Deed of Trust dated the 13th day of March, 1926, made, executed and delivered by J. Eggless, Butterless, Milkless Cake.—Place two cupfuls of brown sugar, two cupfuls of coffee, one-fourth cupful of sweet fat, and one cupful of seedless raisins in a saucepan, cook over slow heat until the sugar is dissolved. Boil gently for five minutes. Cool. Sift three cupfuls of flour with four teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one teaspoonful of cinnamon, one-half teaspoonful of mace, add to this one teaspoonful of salt. Add one-fourth pound of sliced citron and the same of orange peel, mixing the fruit through the dry ingredients. Bake in a paper lined pan, one and one-half hours. This makes a large loaf cake weighing two and one-half pounds. It will not keep indefinitely but may be kept for several weeks.

Place a hard apple in the cake box and renew it when it becomes dry or soft. This will flavor and keep the cakes moist.

Baked Apples and Onions.—Slice six onions and three medium-sized apples, place in layers in a buttered baking dish. Season each layer with salt, pepper and a tablespoonful of sugar for each layer. Add one-fourth cupful of water and bake until the onions are tender. Serve with roast of pork.

Sea Foam Frosting.—Take one-half cupful of light brown sugar, one cupful of granulated sugar, one-fourth cupful of water, two tablespoonfuls of strong coffee, one-fourth teaspoonful of cream of tartar, the whites of two eggs and one-fourth teaspoonful of salt. Boil the sugar, water, coffee and cream of tartar without stirring, until the sirup spins a long thread. Pour slowly over the beaten egg whites, beating until thick enough to hold its shape; add salt, whip again and spread on the cake.

Economical Foods.

A good loaf of bread prepared at home has twice the nourishment that bakery food has and is much more appetizing.

Graham Bread.—Take one cupful of sugar, two and one-half cupfuls of graham flour, one-half cupful of flour, one teaspoonful of soda, one teaspoonful of salt, one cupful of raisins and one cupful each of sweet and sour milk. A pint of buttermilk may be used in place of sour and sweet milk.

Grapenut Bread—Two Loaves.—Sift four cupfuls of flour, four teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one teaspoonful each of salt and soda and one cupful of sugar. Beat one egg, add the dry ingredients with one cupful each of sour and sweet milk, stir in one cupful of grape nuts and bake in two single loaf bread pans.

Tapioca With Apples.—Take one third of a cupful of minute tapioca, add one cupful of boiling canned fruit juice or water and cook with a little salt until clear. Butter a baking dish and pour in the tapioca, cover the top with quartered apples, sprinkle with sugar and dot with bits of butter; bake until the apple is tender. Serve with whipped cream.

Indian Pudding With Apples.—Scald two quarts of milk and stir in one cupful of corn meal; cook until the mixture thickens. Remove from the heat, add one cupful of molasses, one teaspoonful of salt, one-half teaspoonful each of nutmeg and cinnamon and two cupfuls of quartered sweet apples. Add one cupful of finely chopped suet and dust the top of the pudding with flour. Stir occasionally at first and bake for two hours, then add another pint of cold milk. Continue baking until a nice brown crust is formed over the top. Serve hot. This pudding needs no sauce.

Orange Pie.—Fill a baked shell with thinly sliced oranges, sprinkle with sugar and cover with a meringue. Brown in a hot oven and serve cold.

Never eat a hearty meal when physically exhausted or mentally disturbed.

A NORTH DAKOTA IDEA

Something unusually fine in civic life is reported in an article by B. S. Palm of the Department of Agriculture, who tells of a community park for both town and rural people, established near Niagara, N. D.

This park is financed, owned, maintained and operated by representatives of the town and country population, who meet there on equal terms in a spirit of neighborliness for mutual enjoyment.

Chautauqua courses, athletic games and contests, picnics and various club and community meetings are held in the park, which is a real community center.

THREAT OF MACHINE AGE

By REV. DR. RALPH W. SOCKMAN, New York (Methodist)

The modern rise of the machine is accompanied by the modern fall of man. If we are not careful the great American tragedy will be that we shall be incapable of conceiving great tragedy because we are no longer conscious of great destiny.

Two recent anniversaries illumine the trend of our time. We have celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of Edison's epochal invention of the electric light and the seventieth anniversary of John Dewey's birth. The former rightly was hailed as our foremost man of science and the latter as our most formative philosopher. Each has rendered immeasurable service to human society. Edison has given man new controls over his material world which vastly improve the means of living, but his inventions, of course, cannot shed any new light on the ends of living. Dewey's philosophy has for its essence the teaching of man how to control his conduct, but it does not show man the ultimate goals toward which life is to be directed when controlled. Thus we are mastering the implements of living, but we are not getting a better understanding of the ends and significance of life.

MANY LAWS UNFAIR TO WOMEN

By MRS. JANE NORMAN SMITH, National Woman's Party.

There are more than one thousand laws in the United States which discriminate against women. These laws relate to the right of a married woman to contract, to the guardianship of her children, the inheritance and disposal of her property, to the ownership of her own labor and services, and what is more important, to the fight of woman in industry to sell her labor on the same terms as a man.

Laws applying to women workers and not to men are among the greatest discriminations. They close many doors of opportunity to women seeking employment, while women thrown out of work by their passage are invariably forced into harder, lower-paid work, for which they must compete with one another.

This legislation began years ago in the transition stage of women's much-protested invasion of industry. Today, when women are an established and increasingly important part of our economic life, legislation concerning them must be on the same basis as that of their male competitors.

WORLD TURNING TO PEACE

By DR. NICHOLAS MURRAY BUTLER, President Columbia College.

President Hoover and Premier MacDonald, in their recent conferences did more toward furthering an understanding between their nations than could have been accomplished by forty years of diplomatic procedure. Their conference indicated the final breaking down of the old order of war and conflict and the clearing of the last stumbling block from the path of a world that turns from war to peace.

Ramsay MacDonald and Hoover at Washington have done the business for which the world was waiting with bated breath. Public opinion will do the rest. That government or governmental agency which attempts to stand in the way of those official acts that are needed to transform these new convictions and these new understandings into law, will be broken on the wheel.

These are not arrangements which affect alone two nations or any small group of nations. They are arrangements which strike the note of leadership throughout the world and which invite, and indeed compel, universal assent and co-operation.

VALUE OF CHILD INCREASING

By PROF. ROBERT S. WOODWORTH, Columbia University.

Children are becoming a scarcer commodity, and thus their social importance is greater today than ever. The child in psychology is at least fifty years old, but he has come more and more into his own during recent times. Many conditions of modern life conspire to make the individual child of increasing social importance.

Children are becoming a scarcer commodity and must not be wasted. And the adult life into which they are growing is more and more exacting. As the child is important for society, so science is important for the child. Moreover, the child is important for science.

From the scientific and sympathetic study of the child's development we can hope to solve that difficult problem of environment and heredity. We may hope to discover what the child has to learn and what he gets without learning by simple force of nature and growth. We can hope to see how the little child learns and so penetrate somewhat into the mystery of the learning process.
